OVERVIEW OF TRACK

Within digital and knowledge-driven societies creating sustainable value e promoting innovation relies on knowledge creation and sharing as a source to develop social and economic innovation and rediscover organisational intelligence. The potential offered by combining technology and knowledge sources helps to rethink new ways to desing sustainable organisations and support smart growth. The aim of the track is to stimulate the debate opening up to theoretical and empirical papers that elucidate how organisations and communities jointly use and develop technology, knowledge and people to develop a human-centred pathway for value creation. Smartness and sustainability as a goal, a source and vision for change and innovation help value creation processes and drive organisations and communities to redesign processes by rethinking a human-centred pathway in using information technology as a means to support knowledge and innovation development and offer new opportunitis of social and inclusive growth within human-oriented and urban ecosystems.
